YOU ARE INVITED TO masterpiece

A 6-Week Series on Identity

Most of us have been working on ourselves for years. Sketching out who we want to be. Filling in the portrait with what we do, what we have, what others think of us. And somewhere along the way it starts to feel hollow — because the version we've been painting was never the real one.

God made you a masterpiece. Not a project you have to finish yourself. Starting August 30, we're spending six weeks exploring what it means to stop painting over what God already made and start living from it.

TOGETHER WE'LL DISCOVER:

- › Why the self you've been creating is never quite finished — and never quite enough
- › What God says about who you actually are underneath all the layers
- › How the story you grew up with painted over your true identity
- › What it looks like to set down the brush and receive who God says you are

Invite someone who's tired of working on themselves.
